Statement of reasons

This notice, which comes into force on 12 February 2018 and is revoked on 11 February 2023, exempts trueEX from section 310 of the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013. Section 310 requires that a person must not operate, or hold out that the person operates, a financial product market in New Zealand, unless the person holds a licence to operate that market under Part 5 of the Act, or the market is exempt from the licensing requirement under section 312 of the Act.

The Financial Markets Authority (FMA), after satisfying itself of the matters set out in section 557 of the Act, considers it appropriate to grant the exemption set out in this notice for the following reasons-

- The information presented on the trueEX financial product market(s) is simple in its format, the type of product that can be traded on the financial product market(s) is limited, and the conditions of the exemption ensure that all participants in the trueEX financial product market(s) are institutional wholesale investors. Accordingly:
 - the purpose of promoting informed participation of businesses, investors and consumers in the market; and
 - the additional purpose of providing timely, accurate and understandable information to persons to assist those persons to make decisions relating to financial products or the provision of financial services,are substantially achieved without trueEX being subject to licensing requirements; and
- trueEX will not hold investor money or property in relation to any financial product market it operates and will not be a participant in any of the transactions that take place on any financial product market it operates. As such, it is not necessary to impose requirements in relation to those matters to achieve the purpose of the Act relating to governance arrangements and the management of governance risks; and

- given that the statutory purposes described above are substantially met without trueEX being subject to licensing requirements, it is desirable to grant the exemption in order to promote the further statutory purpose of avoiding unnecessary compliance costs.

Furthermore, taking into consideration:

- the matters set out in section 308 regarding the nature of the activities conducted, the size of the market, the nature of the financial products dealt with, the participants, and the technology used; and
- the purpose set out in section 229 to encourage a diversity of financial product markets that take account of the differing needs and objectives of issuers and investors.

The obligations arising out of the operation of subparts 7 and 8 of Part 5 of the Act are out of proportion to any benefits licensing trueEX may bring. From a regulatory perspective, the needs and objectives of the particular investors in relation to the particular products appear to be largely met by the existing arrangements. Also, to subject the issuers whose products are traded on trueEX's financial product market(s) to listing rules and requirements would impose significant costs on both trueEX and the issuers disproportionate to any benefit.

The exemption is subject to conditions limiting the nature of participants, the capacity in which they are participating, and the range of products traded on any facility that has the benefit of the exemption. As such, the FMA considers the exemption is not broader than reasonably necessary to address the matters that gave rise to the exemption.
